California Penal Code (PC) section 1001.80 describes the pretrial diversion statute for current and former members of the United States military who are charged with a misdemeanor offense and who may be suffering from sexual trauma, traumatic brain injury, post-traumatic stress disorder, substance abuse, or mental health problems as a result of their military service (effective on January 1, 2015). Effective August 7, 2017, the statute was amended to specify that a misdemeanor offense for which a defendant may be placed in a pretrial diversion program may include a misdemeanor violation of driving under the influence or a driving under the influence and causing bodily injury. The program should be completed within one year from the date the application is granted and defendant will appear in court for periodic reviews. The Court shall assess whether the defendant should be ordered to participate in a federal or community-based treatment service program with a demonstrated history of specializing in the treatment of mental health problems, including substance abuse, post-traumatic stress disorder, traumatic brain injury, military sexual trauma, and other related mental health problems.
